

Contents

Table of Cases	xiii
Table of Treaties and Statutes	xxi
List of Abbreviations and General Notes	xxv
Introduction	xxvii

I. PRIVATE MORALITY: IS IT MORALLY JUSTIFIABLE FOR AN INDIVIDUAL TO TORTURE A TERRORIST IN ORDER TO SAVE MANY INNOCENT LIVES?

1. Part I—Introduction	3
2. The Wider Moral Issue: Do Consequences or ‘No Go Areas’ Determine What is Ethical in an Extreme Situation?	10
3. Consequentialist Argument for Torturing in a Ticking Bomb Situation	20
4. The Minimal Absolutist Approach I: Anti-absolutism as Morally Untenable	30
5. The Minimal Absolutist Approach II: Arguments for an Absolute Prohibition on Torture	64
6. Part I—Conclusions	89

II. PUBLIC, PRACTICAL MORALITY: IS IT MORALLY JUSTIFIABLE FOR A STATE TO TORTURE IN ORDER TO SAVE MANY INNOCENT LIVES?

7. Part II—Introduction	95
8. Is there a ‘Public Morality’ that is Distinct from ‘Private Morality’?	98
9. ‘Slippery Slope’ and Other Dangers	111
10. Part II—Conclusions	157

III. LEGALIZING TORTURE 1—FOUR MODELS

11. Part III—Introduction	167
12. The Landau Model in Israel	171
13. The ‘Torture Warrants’ Model	183

14. Israel's High Court of Justice Model	200
15. The USA's 'High Value Detainees' Model	223
16. Part III—Conclusions	262

IV. LEGALIZING TORTURE 2—THREE ISSUES

17. Part IV—Introduction	269
18. Is it (Internationally) Legal? Is it Torture?	270
19. The 'Defence of Necessity' as Legal Grounds for Torture	304
20. Part IV—Conclusions	339

V. CONCLUSIONS

21. Conclusions	349
Annex 'The Ticking Bomb' Scenario—a Few Examples	357
Bibliography	365
Index	401