

---

Contents

---

List of Figures	x
Acknowledgements	xi
1 What Is ‘Green Criminology’ and Why Study It?	1
Background and theory to a ‘green criminology’	8
Environmental degradation as ‘crime’, ‘risk’ and ‘social harm’?	11
Environmental ‘crime’	11
Environmental risk	14
Environmental ‘harms’	15
Justice perspectives	18
Why ‘do’ green criminology?	20
‘Green’ questions?	22
2 Environmental Degradation, Social Change and Crime	26
The environment and social change	28
Environmental change and the creation of ‘new’ crimes	32
The criminogenic nature of environmental degradation	38
Population changes, migrations and human trafficking	38
Economic changes	40
Changes in security	44
Social change, environmental harms and methods for green criminologists	49

3	Environmental ‘Crime’: Conceptions, Limitations and Alternatives	56
	Conceptualising ‘environmental crime’	58
	Are criminal penalties an effective way to tackle environmental degradation?	67
	A third option: Restorative and mediation approaches?	71
	Examining environmental crime as green criminologists	75
4	The Corporation and Environmental Harms	81
	Criminological theory and the corporation	86
	Corporations and the criminal law	90
	Green criminology and the corporation: Dimensions and challenges	94
	‘Legitimate’ and ‘illegitimate’ corporations?	98
	Piercing the ‘corporate veil’	100
5	The State and the Environment: Crime, Harm and Responsibility	106
	Criminologies of the state	108
	State-corporate crime	112
	Liability of states for environmental harms under international law	118
	State responsibility for climate change	124
	Examining state crime?	126
6	Responding to Environmental Harm: Policing, Enforcement and Sentencing	129
	The ‘culture’ of enforcement	131
	Detecting and policing environmental harm	134
	Corporate self-policing	139
	Enforcing environmental law and regulations	142
	Responding to, censuring and sentencing environmental transgressions	146
	Preventing environmental harm	151
	Responding to environmental harm: Challenges to green criminology	156

---

7	Environmental Victimisation	159
	Victimology and victims of environmental harm	160
	Defining environmental 'victims'	163
	The unequal impact of environmental harm	166
	Responding to environmental victimisation: Compensation, restitution and redress	172
	Administrative compensation schemes: A solution to environmental redress?	178
	Restorative justice as a means of redress	181
	Ways forward for green victimology	185
8	Exploring Environmental Rights	187
	Green criminology and non-human 'rights'	191
	A 'right' to an unpolluted environment?	192
	The 'greening' of existing rights	196
	Participation rights in relation to environmental harm	199
	Ways forward for 'environmental rights'	205
9	Exploring Green Crime and Wider Harms with Green Criminology	208
	Green criminology themes and 'theory'?	210
	Power relations and inequalities	211
	The identification, management and distribution of risk	212
	A more eco-centric perspective?	212
	The cultures of regulation	214
	Combining themes with theory	215
	Developing a 'green' methodology	216
	Green criminology as a new rendezvous discipline?	220
	Tensions between the macro and the micro	221
	Green criminology and victimology?	223
	Green criminology as mainstream criminology	224
	Glossary	227
	References	229
	Index	260